The course was the 3.1 mile Columbia-Greene Community College course, and features quiet paths through the woods and around a lake, and a magnificent view of the Hudson River. Unfortunately the runners must work too hard to fully appreciate these features, for the route also contains two mean hills. Only John Ross had a better time on his second loop than on his first, as the hills took their toll. In the 3.1 mile Dick Barthelmes maintained a steady lead throughout to win. Jim Hickey held off Joel Nabozny at the wire in a fierce contest for second place, with Tim Atwell fading to fourth in the last half-mile. Albany State Cross-Country star Jim Shrader won the 6.2 mile easily, with race organizer Barry Hopkins unable to hold his first-lap pace on the third hill.
